Limited hearings were held in January, 1964; on jurisdiction as derived from service of the petition and writ of subpoena and appearance. The question considered was: Did jurisdiction in the Eastern District Court result from the service of the petition and writ of subpoena outside of the territorial jurisdiction of the issuing court, without any ancillary or other established proceedings therefor, at a place which was not the alleged bankrupt's place of business, but that of another corporation by which Alexander Goldberg, one of the Gibraltor officers, was employed, and not upon this officer but upon William F. Wadsworth, (one of the petitioning creditors), a short time, truck driver employee, who was not then or ever, an officer of the bankrupt corporation?

The petition and writ of subpoena were served at 599 Tenth Avenue, New York City, New York, which is within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. That Wurlitzer, the filing creditor, knew this was not the address of bankrupt is easily determined from the petition itself, for the address of Gibraltor is there given as 65 Albany Avenue, Freeport, New York, in the County of Nassau. This was Gibraltor's only office.

Regular established procedure for extra-territorial service not being followed, it is claimed that this service does not, and cannot, confer jurisdiction of the Eastern District Court over the bankrupt; furthermore, to allow it to stand would be to allow a precedent to stand which is destructive of the principles of regularity in Federal procedure.

Regarding the charges of fraud raised by the order to show cause, these were referred to a Referee in Bankruptcy to hear and determine. Upon the first appearance of this matter on his calendar on May 14, 1964, the Referee granted an oral motion of the petitioning creditors, joined in orally by the Trustee, and most fortuitously supported by a brief of the petitioning creditors, to dismiss the said charges, although this same Referee, in his decision, stated that this case presented a "very signal and interesting point of law".

Appeals were taken to the Second Circuit on the question of jurisdiction, i.e., whether a District Court, sitting as a Court of Bankruptcy, is confined to its territorial limitations in the service of initial process in bankruptcy proceedings, as well as from the decision dismissing the allegations of fraud. Both appeals were denied without opinion. The petitioning bankrupt, unfortunately, was unable to perfect its appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States on these two questions because of illness of counsel. The denial of an application for enlargement of time terminated these appeals.

At the hearings prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy on August 19, 1960, the petitioning creditors were not required to prove any claims, nor were hearings held upon the claims; an attorney, retained by one, Sanford J. Moore, the then New York distributor for Wurlitzer, to protect his individual interests, conceded all claims and the concession was accepted—even in spite of the fact that he was not retained by, nor authorized to appear for, the bankrupt.

As to The Wurlitzer Company, reconsideration is sought because:

a. Wurlitzer did not, at any time, as is required by the Personal Property Law of the State of New York, give any statement of account to its distributor or to its customer, the bankrupt within. The bankrupt, having allegedly guaranteed all of the obligations of the distributor, became independently entitled to such a statement of account.

b. This assumption of the obligation by the bankrupt was without any consideration, contrary to New York law. The devices used for such assumption were conditional sales contracts or consolidated conditional sales contracts or chattel mortgages, which created and pyramided a paper obligation, clothed, as a result of filing, with the dignity of a record obligation. In many instances, not only did the bankrupt not have possession of the chattels set forth in any one particular instrument, but, as to those listed in the chattel mortgages, it did not have title either. At any time, Wurlitzer could, as it did here, claim one or more breaches of these paper agreements on the part of the bankrupt, even though, in truth and in fact, no breach could have been caused by the bankrupt where it did not have possession or title. The obligations so created make up a substantial part of the claim of Wurlitzer in the sum of $1,064,832.87.

c. The indebtedness charged to Gibraltor was artfully contrived to show liabilities far in excess of the net worth and its purported hopeless insolvency. Also, to ensure to Wurlitzer full payment on whatever obligations were actually due and owing to it. The means used were simple enough in themselves. For example:

Not crediting Gibraltor with payments made by it on its own purchases.

Not deducting from the total of the guaranteed obligations the direct indebtedness of Gibraltor for purchases. To the contrary, this direct liability was charged to Gibraltor de novo by inclusion in the guaranteed debts.

Not crediting Gibraltor with substantial weekly payments made by it within the four month period prior to the filing of the petition in involuntary bankruptcy on March 18, 1960, and for about one week thereafter, which total the approximate amount of $250,000.00.

Duplicating charges, by repeating a substantial number of chattels again and again, sometimes as many as five times, in the various contracts and agreements. Since each repetition represents approximately $850.00, (the wholesale price of the juke box), the total of all such repetitions adds up to a most considerable sum.

Not allowing credit for machines which were returned to Wurlitzer.

Adding in the obligations of a company which is not involved in this bankruptcy and whose indebtedness, if any, was not guaranteed by bankrupt, i.e., Sandy Moore Pennsylvania Corp.

It did not give credit for money found in the juke boxes at the time of their seizure, and which money does not appear even as an estate asset.

It did not give credit for over 100,000 records which were seized with the machines, each record representing 50¢.

It failed to deduct the amounts due on third party contracts which were paid in full by the third party purchasers.

It failed to give credit, by way of set-off, for payments made by the distributor into the "Hold Back", "Bad Debt" or "Equity" reserve, which the distributor had to, and did, maintain at all times herein with Wurlitzer, and which reserve was then, and is now, in the possession of Wurlitzer and is in a very substantial sum. What happened to this reserve? Evidently, it was not used as intended, to pay off defaulted third party obligations before charging the distributor therewith. It would appear that all such third party obligations were, without exception, charged to the distributor and, sequentially, to Gibraltor. Since this reserve fund was not, in the bankruptcy proceedings, used as a set-off against the liabilities charged under the guarantee, Wurlitzer must be considered a secured creditor to the full extent of the reserve fund. Only those claims which exceed the reserve fund could be considered herein. The amount of the equity reserve is not stated. One cannot determine whether all, or a portion, of the Wurlitzer claim, has been paid from this reserve fund, and if a portion, the extent to which this claim was paid.

In failing to give notice to Gibraltor, as obligor under the guarantee, of any defaults on third party paper. For it was only by default that Gibraltor's contingent liability under the guarantee became a fixed liability. This lack of notice prevents any determination as to what portion of the guaranteed obligations became fixed obligations at, or prior to, the time of the filing of the petition in involuntary bankrutcy, and what portion remained contingent. Instead of segregating the debts according to their nature, i.e., fixed or contingent, Wurlitzer proceeded to include all third party obligations in its claim. This is more than pyramiding; this is piracy.

d. The Wurlitzer claim, during the pendency of these bankruptcy proceedings, was not subjected to any offset whatever on collections made directly by Wurlitzer from third party customers after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy; in many instances, Wurlitzer sued on such obligations in its own name. The total of all such collections is unknown, for what Wurlitzer received, it kept, advising no one, least of all the Court and the Trustee, even though the obligations upon which it received payments were, and still are, included in the overall total.

e. It included shipments made to distributor on open account, in spite of orders to the contrary, and which were refused and returned.

f. It included chattels shipped to distributor after October 1, 1959, and which were paid for in cash, the distributor being on C.O.D. on and after such date.

The reasons listed above are, apart from others, sufficiently meritorious to warrant reconsideration. Consideration of the guarantee and its validity emphasizes the need for reconsideration. For this document, which is the basis for Gibraltor's entire liability to Wurlitzer, excepting, of course, its own purchases, is a void guarantee. Apart from the fact that there was no consideration to the bankrupt therefor, this guarantee did not contain a stockholders' consent as required by the laws of this state. The consent which is attached to the guarantee is that of a person who was not a stockholder on the date of its alleged execution. This consent depends for its validity upon a pledge agreement ostensibly executed by the then stockholder of Gibraltor but which, instead, bears a forged signature of the stockholder. The forgery voids the pledge agreement; with it goes the alleged stockholder's consent.

An odd fact for which there appears to be no rationale is that Wurlitzer, by virtue of stock certificate No. 151, became a stockholder of all the authorized, issued stock of Gibraltor, to wit, 3 shares. According to this, assuming this stock certificate was validly issued, it appears that an undisclosed principal-subsidiary relationship existed at the time of the filing of the petition in involuntary bankruptcy, and that the proper party from whom to obtain a stockholder's consent to validate the guarantee referred to above, would have been Wurlitzer!

There are two chattel mortgages involved which are alleged to have been executed by the officers of this bankrupt, one on September 17, 1959, and one on October 5, 1959. Proceedings are even now pending in the Supreme Court, Nassau County, to expunge both. The September, 1959, chattel mortgage, because of forgery in the signature of the officer who is supposed to have executed it, and in the signature of the witness who is supposed to have witnessed the execution. The October, 1959, chattel mortgage, because the guarantee contained therein was backdated without the knowledge and consent of the bankrupt, because of lack of consideration and other substantial defects. These two void mortgages are important for it is by these instruments that chattels not sold by Wurlitzer, to bankrupt or otherwise, and not owned by bankrupt, became subject to levy by Wurlitzer.

The Bankruptcy Act places upon bankrupts the duty of advising their trustees of instances of fraud. This bankrupt has more than discharged its duty. It not only called the attention of the Trustee to these and other frauds, forgeries and other instances of disregard of law, but it has also taken affirmative steps to try and obtain hearings thereon. The endeavors of the bankrupt were not successful. For the Trustee in Bankruptcy saw fit to align himself with the creditors and refused to inquire into the charges, not even to make fundamental inquiries to ascertain whether there is any substance to them.

The claims of Wurlitzer, based upon conditional sales contracts, appear to be those of Wurlitzer Acceptance Corporation; each contract bears an assignment on the reverse side thereof whereby Wurlitzer assigned to WAC without recourse; none bears an assignment back to Wurlitzer. One must conclude, then, that the major petitioning creditor, Wurlitzer, is not the proper party in interest. WAC is the proper party. That WAC did not appear as such in the bankruptcy is understandable since WAC was not and is not, authorized to do business within the State of New York. Whether Wurlitzer is authorized to do business in New York is an open question. This company had not, at that time, or any time to date, complied with General Corporation Law §8 and Business Corporation Law §104 (b), 402 (3). The penalty prescribed by Section 104b, General Corporation Law, for non-compliance is modification of the status of the corporation involved to that of an unauthorized corporation. Accordingly, both corporations may have been improperly accepted as petitioning creditors. As for the two claims presented by WAC in the bankruptcy, the following reasons are set forth for reconsideration thereof:

g. Out of the two claims, one was current at the time WAC filed as petitioning creditor; the other was paid in full for the actual number of machines received by the purchaser.

h. Both of these debts have been since paid off. By not striking them from the bankruptcy claims, WAC will be permitted to collect twice. And Wurlitzer, under the guarantee, will be allowed to collect on these claims as though they were unpaid.

i. WAC claimed the benefits of the guarantee as assignee of Wurlitzer even though the assignment was without recourse.

j. The notes were void for usury. Both notes charged 7½% interest per annum whereas the legal rate of interest in New York for individuals was then, and still is, 6%.

As for William F. Wadsworth, this person became a petitioning creditor for alleged wages due in the sum of $125.00 for a one week work period. This, in spite of the fact that payments were shown to have been made to him during this period in an amount in excess of this claim. The Referee found this amount to be due and owing, not as wages, but in lieu of workmen's compensation benefits which were undetermined at that time, for an injury sustained by Wadsworth while in the employ of someone other than the bankrupt herein. No award had been made by the Compensation Board at the time that Wadsworth filed as a creditor in this bankruptcy, nor at the time of the Referee's finding. The award was made several months later. When made, it was not charged to Gibraltor, which carried compensation insurance, but to the employer of this creditor at the time of his injury and paid by such employer's carrier. At best, the Referee's finding was against an award in futuro and in violation of 11 USCA 103(6). However, since Wadsworth received full payment from Workmen's Compensation benefits, allowing him to collect again in this bankruptcy would be permitting him to profit by his wrongfully asserted claim and receive a double or, perhaps, triple payment, if one takes into consideration excess payments made to him and which Wadsworth claimed were loans but which still remain unrepaid. This claim, upon reconsideration, should be dismissed.

The National Bank of Westchester, an intervening creditor, bases its claim upon a confession of judgment executed by Sanford J. Moore and his wife, Estelle Moore.

The acknowledgment in the said confession of the signature of Estelle Moore is a forgery. Proceedings are pending locally to expunge this guarantee from the record because of the forgery. Under the circumstances, reconsideration is certainly required for it may well result in total disallowance of this claim.

Milton Negrin, another intervening creditor, bases his claim on a promissory note given to him by Sanford J. Moore, allegedly as an officer of the bankrupt. This claim should not be allowed. There is no showing that the bankrupt was the recipient of the loan transaction or that Milton Negrin did not know that Sanford J. Moore was not an officer and was not authorized to act for the bankrupt, or to sign as such officer.

These reasons are sufficient in themselves to warrant reconsideration of each and every claim of the creditors herein; yet they have been consistently disregarded by the courts below. Just as the statutory provisions for computing the number of creditors, found in 11 USCA 95, have been disregarded and an employee was allowed and counted as a creditor, and secured creditors were also as well as a creditor who received preferential payments.

Reason for Granting the Writ

Under General Order 21 (6) it has been held that a bankrupt may look to expunge a claim filed against the estate, whether the estate is solvent or insolvent. Not only this General Order, but 11 USCA Sections 11(2) and 93 provide for re-examination of allowed claims at any time before the closing of the bankruptcy estate. The bankrupt is considered to be a party in interest, regardless of estate solvency, and has a right to object to allowance of a claim. In re Povill, 105 F. 2d 157. Although reconsideration proceedings are limited only as to those claims which are sought to be expunged or diminished, this is not a bar to the within petition, because that is precisely the relief this bankrupt is seeking. General Order 21(6) contains no initial requirement that a bankrupt prove itself to be a party aggrieved. Had there been such a requirement, this bankrupt would have easily qualified. It is not discharged. Nor can it ever be discharged from the tax claims. In re Lewensohn, 121 F. 538, held, this General Order regulates the procedure for re-examination without regard to the party by whom made or the time when it may be pursued. It neither adds to, nor subtracts from, the duties of a bankrupt, or a trustee. 11 USCA 25 charges a bankrupt with the duty of reporting to his trustee on the correctness of claims filed and disclosing immediately to his trustee any facts coming to the bankrupt's attention as to incorrectness of filed proofs of claim, as to falseness of claims filed, as to any attempt by creditors or other persons to evade the provisions of this act. In re Ankeny, 100 F. 614, A. B. Carton Co., 148 F. 63.

Under general equitable principles, a bankrupt has a right to object to illegal claims. Section 93 of 11 USCA sets forth the data to be contained in a proof of claim, i.e., the manner in which the said claim arose, the consideration therefor, whether it is still due and owing; subdivision (b) requires a claim, founded upon a written instrument, embody such instrument; it further provides that claims, duly proved, shall be allowed upon presentation unless objection to the allowance shall be made by any party in interest or unless consideration thereon shall be discontinued for cause by the court upon its own motion or that of others. The trustee is among those others. The trustee is, at all times, under the affirmative duty of scrutinizing all claims. And if the trustee reaches the conclusion that they are vulnerable, he is to seek reconsideration under 11 USCA 93. In re Brown, 118 F. 2d 198.

This bankrupt complied with the statutory duty imposed upon it. It gave notice of the frauds to its trustee. The trustee did nothing. Since the trustee failed in his duty, the bankrupt then exercised its right under the law and sought reconsideration upon its own.

Section 93 of the Act does not conflict with General Order 21 (6). It complements it. Both this section and the general order give to a referee or to a court of bankruptcy, as well as to others, the right to move for review and revision of claims presented by any creditor and to correct the original order adjudicating the claim after reconsideration. In a case such as ours, where, in the first instance, none of the creditors were required to present any proof of the claims made because they were conceded (although invalidly) and where, thereafter, evidence of fraud was obtained which, when sought to be presented to the trustee and to the court, was disregarded, the reasons for reconsideration and review of each and every claim are that much more emphasized and make such requested relief practically mandatory. That the claims were previously allowed by the Referee is no bar to reconsideration, for it has been held, In re Jule Motor Corp., 34 F. Supp. 742, that an allowance of claims by a referee in the first instance is not res adjudicata to a later reconsideration. It has been further held that a bankruptcy court is a court of equity, and as such, has power to set aside false claims where the issue of fraud was not previously adjudicated. Heiser v. Woodruff, 327 U. S. 726. In the instant case, there has been absolutely no previous adjudication on the question of fraud. It has been further held that if part of a petitioning creditor's claim is valid and the other part is invalid for fraud, or any other reason, the claim is not allowed in any sum. In re Flick, 105 F. 503. Ordinarily, a Court of Appeals will not disturb the findings of a lower court as to a claim unless, in the first instance, the claim is unsupported by evidence. There was no evidence in this case, only unauthorized concessions. In re Lawrence, 134 F. 843.

The charges herein raised by the bankrupt and the objections made by the bankrupt to the payment of any of these claims, by their very nature, require they be heard and determined. Otherwise, denying reconsideration will result in the peculiar situation of the courts, to whom notice of frauds was sought to be given time and time again, and which refused to take any note of such frauds committed by the creditors in this bankruptcy, of becoming parties to each and every fraud alleged; in such a position, whatever the courts have done or will do in the future cannot be held to be other than invalid, they were parties to the frauds. The adjudication in bankruptcy, having its basis in fraud, is void. All proceedings had thereunder are, consequently, void.

For as long as an estate has not been closed, claims which have been allowed may be reconsidered; they may be reviewed in whole, they may be reviewed in part. If a dividend has been paid, to which the receiving party is not entitled, it must be refunded. This estate has not been closed. No date bar is, or can be, present.

As for provability of claims, that is a burden devolving upon the claimants. If the claimants can not carry that burden and prove each and every item of the claims which led to the extraordinary million dollar total, that, itself, becomes an additional reason for expunging their claims against this bankrupt. Zeitinger et al. v. Hargadine-McKittrick Drygoods Co., 244 F. 719, very clearly stated the principle that a court of bankruptcy cannot be compelled to exercise its jurisdiction in aid of fraud, and has the power to intervene in prevention thereof. In the case cited, stockholders were permitted to contest a voluntary petition filed by officers and directors of the alleged voluntary bankrupt and to proceed against the corporation and its directors for appointment of a receiver of the corporate assets and for an accounting because of fraud, mismanagement, loss and waste of the corporate assets. The basis for its reason was simply this: to do otherwise would be a fraud upon the court, aided and abetted by the court, " * * * that there is and can be no law or practice which would compel a court of bankruptcy or any other court, to become a party to a fraud" (p. 722). This principal guided the court to its decision. The testimony adduced before it caused the court to further hold that the only purpose for filing the petition in bankruptcy was to bring about the appointment of a Trustee in Bankruptcy who would be appointed and controlled by the creditors (the officers and directors), and who would be solely aligned with these creditors to the detriment of the bankrupt. Under the circumstances, no district court or any other court is helpless to prevent a fraud upon its own jurisdiction; it can act, and should act, to prevent illegal and unequitable results, because rooted in fraud, from coming about.

This is the petitioner's argument.

Not permitting the reconsideration sought by Gibraltor is to deny it due process as well as help further the frauds of the creditors. The fact that the Trustee has aligned himself with the petitioning creditors and the intervening creditor is no reason why the court, in the interests of justice, which must always be untainted by fraud, should not look into this matter and require that to be done which should have been done previously. It would also appear that this bankruptcy may, very probably, be most benefitted by the appointment of a special master to conduct hearings upon the existence and validity of each and every claim leading to the totals herein; validity as tested and determined pursuant to the laws of the State of New York.

Reconsideration is the means by which unscrupulous creditors are prevented from taking such advantage of the Bankruptcy Courts as to transform them into a form of authoritative collection agency. It aids in sifting the proper from improper claims. It is a preventative against frauds, and their perpetuation, prior to, during, or subsequent to adjudication.

The interests of due process, of the orderly administration of justice and regularity in Federal practice and procedure lead irresistably to this conclusion:

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this petition for a writ of certiorari to review the judgment of the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit should be granted.

Petition for Rehearing en Banc

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS

SECOND CIRCUIT

Appeal No. 29805

In the Matter

Bankrupt.

To: The Honorable Mr. Chief Justice Lumbard, Mr. Justice Hays and Mr. Justice Anderson, of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

The petition of Larry Leon, President of the within corporate bankrupt, respectfully shows:

1. That on the 26th day of July, 1965, the said Honorable Judges of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, dismissed the appeal of the bankrupt herein for reconsideration of certain claims, upon the conclusion of the oral argument presented by one of the attorneys for the bankrupt, on behalf of the bankrupt.

2. That the appeal in question arose as follows:

a—from an order of Referee Duberstein directing that the trustee need take no steps to object to certain claims, and, also, denying the bankrupt's cross-motion requesting reconsideration of those claims for cause.

b—from the order of Mr. Justice Dooling, of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York, denying the petition of the bankrupt herein to review the findings of the referee and sustaining the said findings of the referee.

3. The bankrupt, at no previous time, requested the claims of the creditors be proved as against it, nor were the said claims proved. That the claims were conceded by an attorney who was not authorized to appear for the bankrupt, Gibraltor Amusements, Ltd., and the said concession was made without the knowledge, consent or prior permission of the bankrupt, in the proceedings in which the bankrupt did not appear.

4. That this bankrupt has caused an investigation to be made by its attorneys, Mechta & Mechta, which said investigation is still continuing, and, as a result thereof, has found:

.01) The two claims of Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp., an intervening creditor, came into its possession by assignment from The Wurlitzer Company; that the said Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp. thereafter reassigned the said notes back to the original assignor, The Wurlitzer Company, and, thereafter, The Wurlitzer Company reassigned the said notes, once again, to Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp. That the assignments and reassignments did not involve the payment of any consideration, being mere bookkeeping entries.

.02) That these two claims, as well as all the claims presented by The Wurlitzer Company, for Wurlitzer merchandise, are based on a void guaranty which was given by the bankrupt guaranteeing the indebtedness of the New York Wurlitzer distributor on all of its customers' notes which were given in connection with the purchase of equipment.

.03) That one of the two claims has been paid in full, and the other claim may now be paid in full.

.03) That Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp. is not authorized to do business in the State of New York, and, accordingly, according to the Laws of the State of New York, is not able to institute or maintain any action or proceedings in its behalf. That the appearance by Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp., in this bankruptcy, and its maintenance of the proceedings herein constitutes an act which is offensive to the Laws of the State of New York, and is malum prohibitum, and this fact was known, at all times, to Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp.

.04) That recognizing Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp. herein will amount to condoning a grave violation of law committed by this corporation, since the avowed purpose for which this corporation was created was to be the credit agent, or company, on all Wurlitzer conditional sales contracts, whether wholesale or retail, in all states wherever Wurlitzer products were sold.

.05) That this court, nor the court below, has any jurisdiction over Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp. because it is a corporation, foreign to New York, not authorized to do business in New York, and is barred from instituting or maintaining actions or proceedings in its behalf.

.06) As to Wadsworth, another petitioning creditor, a finding of "wages due in lieu of compensation" is beyond the jurisdiction of the court. Especially so since there was no award of the Workmen's Compensation Board, made at the time of the finding. Furthermore, the bankrupt herein did have workmen's compensation insurance and, had the claim of this creditor been a proper claim against the bankrupt, as employer, (Which the bankrupt was not, as a matter of fact, at the time of the accident involving this creditor), this creditor could have filed with the carrier for the bankrupt. Furthermore, the characterization of this creditor's claim, "in lieu of workmen's compensation" is an attempted finding of entitlement of this creditor to compensation benefits and the amount of same, which is clearly beyond the duty of a referee in bankruptcy.

.07) This creditor claimed a sum due as wages. The finding of the referee, by indirection, finds no sum due as wages. Accordingly, this creditor's claim must fall.

.08) This creditor, knowing the contrary to be true, since he received the payment of the workmen's compensation partial benefit, did not advise the referee of such fact, thereby misleading the referee into believing something was currently due and owing to him.

.09) This creditor, Wadsworth, was, upon information and belief, receiving moneys from The Wurlitzer Company, while employed by the bankrupt herein, for the purpose of supply The Wurlitzer Company with confidential information as to his employer, this bankrupt, and did not advise the referee, or the court, at any time, regarding his taking of such moneys.

.10) That the attorneys for the major petitioning creditors entered into a contingent retainer with this creditor, Wadsworth, both as to payment and amount, same being contingent upon a recovery by him in this bankruptcy, the contingency being ½ of the amount to be collected by him.

.11) Examination of the conditional sales contracts upon which The Wurlitzer Company bases its claim, show that the said conditional sales contracts and notes were assigned by it to Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp. Therefore, the proper party in interest to claim therefor would be Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp. This creditor is not a proper party. The said contracts do not contain any assignment back.

.12) That this reveals a conspiracy between The Wurlitzer Company and Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp. to split claims so as to create another creditor.

.13) That Wurlitzer, knowing the contrary to be true, failed to reveal to the referee, or to this court, or the lower court, at any times, as its status as an agent for Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp., to whom it assigned all the commercial paper, third party or otherwise, taken from its New York distributor, and which paper was allegedly guaranteed by the bankrupt herein.

.14) That this petitioning creditor has no right to institute or maintain any actions in the State of New York, since, in its application for authorization to do business in the State of New York, and thereafter, it failed to comply with the corporate laws pertaining to foreign corporations and did not set forth its location, as well as an address to which the Secretary of State may mail process served upon him. That this recently came to light in another matter. (Suffolk & Nassau Amusement Co., Inc. v. The Wurlitzer Company, Supreme Court, Nassau County, Index No.: 3063/1964), wherein, in an endeavor to avoid service of a summons, The Wurlitzer Company claimed that the address filed with the Secretary of State of the State of New York was not the address of its location. That in such circumstances, the Laws of this state do not hold foreign corporations which have not filed the location address, to be either de jure or de facto corporations. That The Wurlitzer Company, being neither de jure nor de facto, cannot maintain any action in the courts, or any proceedings whatsoever, of the State of New York, and, accordingly, this court and the court below exceeded its jurisdiction. That The Wurlitzer Company wilfully misrepresented its status as a qualified foreign corporation authorized to do business with the State of New York.

.15) That the major petitioning creditor, The Wurlitzer Company, deliberately failed to inform the trustee herein of collections made by it on third party paper.

.16) That The Wurlitzer Company deliberately misinformed the courts and the trustee herein by claiming a 100% credit loss on all sales made by its New York distributor, a percentage which is totally unheard of in the business world.

.17) That it has recently come to light that a chattel mortgage, ostensibly given by the bankrupt herein, to The Wurlitzer Company, contains a forgery, in that the president of Gibraltor did not sign the said chattel mortgage, nor did the witness named therein sign as such witness. That the necessary steps are being taken to expunge this chattel mortgage from the record. That the chattel mortgage is a void mortgage and the goods therein set forth must be held free of the mortgage lien and the amount of the claim set forth in the mortgage must be totally nullified.

.18) That this creditor wilfully and deliberately set about to create such a debtor out of this bankrupt as would be free of all debts except those of itself, its subsidiary and, when a third creditor was required, an employee of the bankrupt who was in its pay and whose debt was significantly small. That tax liens for withholding taxes due on Gibraltor employees were also subjected to the fraudulent schemes of this creditor, whereby the employees were charged for 2 quarters of 1959, to Sandy Moore Distributing Corp., which, at that time, was inoperative and no longer in business, and thereafter, i.e., for the 3rd and 4th quarters of 1959, returned to the books of Gibraltor, this being a time when the employee roster was reduced by layoffs. That the tax claim of the Internal Revenue Service herein, for withholding taxes not paid by the above named distributing corporation is a tax claim which should be rightfully charged to Gibraltor in full, and payment thereon made in full, from the assets of this bankrupt's estate. That the intricacies of connivance by Wurlitzer as exhibited here are not surprising if one considers the fact that this company has put other distributors into bankruptcy, taken over the operation of another distributorship in violation of the anti-trust consent decrees, caused another distributor to purchase vending routes so as to stimulate sales of its products regardless of the financial ability of this distributor to do so; and, in connection with this bankrupt, is seeking to hold it liable for a conditional sale contract executed by a company and which was given on this creditor's representation that it would merely be held as collateral security for distributor's obligations, as no merchandise was purchased or contemplated to be purchased, and the numbers inserted in this conditional sale contract were fictional.

.19) That this creditor caused the conditional sales contracts which form the basis of its claim, by divers means even including fraud, duress, intimidation, to be executed in blank to a great extent and thereafter inserted such data as it desired; and as to others, required their execution without permitting any inspection thereof.

.20) That it maintained its own employee in the office of the New York distributor from October, 1959, through March 17, 1960, and that the said employee of Wurlitzer did go to the offices of the bankrupt, at an hour when collectors were returning from their daily rounds, and did take the money from the said collectors and count out for itself $400.00, per day, the payment made by this bankrupt on obligations, and a double payment for Fridays. And after so doing, this Wurlitzer employee would then turn over the balance of any moneys to the collectors; this, in spite of the fact that the collectors were also collecting on routes of other vending companies.

.21) That this petitioning creditor, in pursuit of its conspiracy to put the said bankrupt corporation into bankruptcy, induced the creditor Wadsworth, a Gibraltor employee at that time, to be present at 599 10th Avenue, New York City, N. Y., the former address of the New York distributor, and receive service of the writ of subpoena and petition while posing as an officer of Gibraltor.

5. Your petitioner verily believes that this court was in error in dismissing the appeal of the within bankrupt for the reasons set forth above. Greater detail than usual was set forth herein so that this court may be made aware of the motives possessed by this creditor, as well as of the need for reconsideration of the claims herein.

6. That the bankrupt herein claims it is an aggrieved party and has the right to make this application, pursuant to General Order 21(6). If the claims are subject to being proven, the bankrupt asserts that its liability to the petitioning creditors will be reduced to, at best, an insignificant fraction hereof. Further, that the offsets which The Wurlitzer Company owes to its then New York distributor should be allowed, since they arose from the same transactions for which the guarantees from the bankrupt were demanded by Wurlitzer. That, if allowed, moneys will be owed to the bankrupt. Furthermore, if the reconsideration is not allowed, and if the Internal Revenue Service, by its own independent investigation determined that the liability for withholding taxes, now claimed as being due from Sandy Moore Distributing Corp., were actually due and owing from the bankrupt herein, since the withholding taxes were those for Gilbraltor employees, then this bankrupt will be left with a tax liability substantial in amount, increased with penalties and interest. Such tax liability is not dischargeable in bankruptcy. Reconsideration, even at this time, would show the true liability for these tax claims as being that of the bankrupt herein, and the estate, even now, is sufficient to pay this said tax liability. Rather than being absolved of all liability, the bankrupt, if rehearing is denied, will be left with a substantial and probable financial burden which will detrimentally affect its rights. This has been held sufficient reason to make a person so affected an aggrieved person. Nor can the bankrupt rely on the trustee herein to protect its rights because the trustee opposes reconsideration, or any inquiry into the nature of the txa claims, preferring to be considered liberal in his attitude of settling the tax claims on the theory they are Sandy Moore Distributing Corp. liabilities, even though the facts are otherwise; and has consistently refused to permit the bankrupt to present any evidence to him of the frauds herein concerned, and has aligned himself with the creditors at all times. Furthermore, a bankrupt has been held to have an appealable interest if the equity in the property to be recaptured would create a surplus above his debts. (Tyne v. Ventucci, 359 U. S. 974.) A proper determination of the subject bankrupt's indebtedness is mandated herein, and a consideration of offsets due is also required. Upon the happening of these events, this bankrupt would emerge as a solvent, going corporation, for it would have a surplus above any indebtedness.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons hereinabove set forth, and those set forth in the brief on behalf of this bankrupt, and upon all of the proceedings had herein, your petitioner prays leave for a rehearing of this said appeal before this court sitting en banc, as the alleged guaranty of bankrupt is a continuing one and, apparently, not dischargeable.

I, FRANCES MECHTA, one of the attorneys for Gibraltor Amusements, Ltd., bankrupt herein, and member of the firm of Mechta & Mechta, do hereby certify that this application for a rehearing en banc is presented in good faith and not for the purposes of delay and because of the profound belief had that frauds committed by the petitioning creditors herein, if inquired into, would result in the solvency of the bankrupt, and because of the great belief that such frauds must not be permitted to be continued.

APPENDIX C

Decision of United States Court of Appeals

PER CURIAM:

We affirm in open court the order of the district court which approved the action of the bankruptcy referee in declining to instruct the Trustee in Bankruptcy to oppose claims of certain creditors, for the reasons stated by Judge Dooling in his opinion dated June 2, 1965.

APPENDIX D

Decision of Mr. Justice Dooling, United States District Court, Eastern District of New York

DOOLING, D. J.

The petition seeks review of an order of The Honorable Samuel C. Duberstein, Referee, entered March 9, 1965, which declined to direct the Trustee to take steps to object to the claims of National Bank of Westchester, Milton Negrin, Wurlitzer Company, Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp., or William Wadsworth; the attorneys for the petitioner had requested the Trustee to do so on May 4, 1964; the Trustee asked the Referee for instructions; the attorneys for the petitioner presented an affidavit asking that the Referee direct the Trustee to oppose the claims; and, after a hearing, the learned Referee made the order sought to be reviewed.

The order of the Referee is affirmed.

1. The claim of William Wadsworth is in the amount of $125.00. The suggested grounds of objection (Affidavit of Frances Mechta, February 16, 1965, pages 7-8) include grounds authoritatively rejected more than once and, to the extent (if any) not embraced by prior adjudications, are uncertain and incomprehensible. No interest of the estate or of any creditor could conceivably be served by litigating a claim so dubiously challenged, so trifling in amount and so certain to involve an absolute economic waste of action. See Memorandum and Order of July 27, 1964, part 5.

2. The Milton Negrin claim of $1,700.00 is challenged on the theory that the note given to evidence the debt owed to Negrin was signed by Sanford J. Moore who, it is said, had no authority to sign the note.

The bankrupt in its answer to the involuntary petition alleged and the Referee in Bankruptcy determined that Milton Negrin was one of the bankrupt's more-than-twelve creditors. The fanciful assertion that Moore did not have authority to sign the note, if it were true (and the record in this bankruptcy demonstrates in a myriad of ways that it is false and it, moreover, has been adjudicated to be false by Chief Judge Zavatt's necessary finding that Moore was the bankrupt's general manager), would be beside the point. The assertion does not deny the bankrupt's indebtedness to Negrin and there is no suggestion that the debt was not in the amount of $1,700.00.

3. The National Bank of Westchester has an allowed claim of $89,353.04 on a Confession of Judgment tracing back to a guaranty executed by the bankrupt through Moore. The claim is not challenged except by the exhausted assertions that Moore was unauthorized, the stockholders consent not effective, Mrs. Moore's signature forged in one of two places, and the consideration not shown to have gone to the bankrupt because related to Moore Manhattan activities. No evidence was brought forward, and it was not even suggested that evidence might exist, which could tend to indicate that the Trustee could successfully resist the claim on its underlying merits. The rational tendency of the supposed defects, if they had any substance, would be to change the basis of the bank's claim but not its amount or payability. The making of the loan to the Moore complex is not denied, reliance on the bankrupt's credit is not denied and the bankrupt's fraud upon the bank is hardly a defense to the claim.

4. The Wurlitzer Acceptance Corporation claim will not again be reviewed. See Memorandum and Order of July 27, 1964, part 4. If it were true that the notes were "reassigned" to Wurlitzer Company and thereafter were paid belatedly by the makers to Wurlitzer, not to Acceptance, that would not of itself and without more result in "payment" of the bankrupt's debt to Acceptance. The claim of Acceptance was based on the bankrupt's promise not on the notes that collateralized Acceptance's advance to Wurlitzer. Much more would have to be shown to arrive at the conclusion that the bankrupt's account was clear with Acceptance, and no suggestion was made that such a showing was possible.

5. Wurlitzer Company now holds allowed claims of $1,064,832.87. Other principal creditors are the National Bank of Westchester $89,353.04, Morris Karnes $15,000.00, and Wurlitzer Acceptance $9,036.00. Total claims are about $1,200,000.00. The assets collected total about $300,000.00. The expectation of the Trustee is that the dividends to creditors may reach 15½% and could conceivably reach 20% "by some miracle".

Against the Wurlitzer claim the soi-disant attorneys for the bankrupt advance the rigamarole about the bankrupt's frauds on Wurlitzer constituting a defense to Wurlitzer's claim and the guaranty farrago, neither of which deserves further mention. See Memorandum and Order, July 27, 1964, pages 1-6, 7-8. There is also advanced the suggestion that the claim should be reduced in amount by credits for "earned bonuses" due Sandy Moore Manhattan Corp. (of whom bankrupt was the guarantor), preferential payments received by Wurlitzer in the four months before bankruptcy (amounting perhaps to $42,500), for collections from third parties after bankruptcy on ultimate-purchaser accounts which, in a normal business relation, would have been applied to reduce Sandy Moore Manhattan debt for purchases of equipment from Wurlitzer and the related debt of bankrupt, and for machines rejected or returned. The aggregate of the supposed credits is vaguely said to be in the order of $500,000.00.

The only specific data referred to indicate that the aggregate claim of Wurlitzer Company in the three categories used by the attorneys for the petitioner would have been $1,205,706.10 and that credits through March 10, 1960, would have reduced the claim to $1,114,870.38. It appears, however, that although the claim as originally made was about $1,126,000 reduced by credits to $1,064,-832.87, no (or, certainly, no other) evidence on which the Referee would have been justified in relying was proffered to him—or to the Trustee. As against that stood the prospect of a protracted contest with little prospect that the ultimate pattern of liquidation and distribution could be much altered by even substantial inroads on Wurlitzer's claim—except that administration expenses would certainly be materially increased and the base of distribution correspondingly reduced.

The Trustee was properly concerned with, and the Referee properly took account of, a standing arrangement under which (a) Wurlitzer's counsel are not to press any claims for an allowance of fees and expenses for the very substantial and extensive legal services they have rendered to the estate in bearing a principal part of the burden of obtaining the adjudication, sustaining it, and protecting it against belated vacatur, and (b) Wurlitzer withdrew its motion to require the Trustee to pay over to Wurlitzer the proceeds of the Trustee's sales of certain equipment allegedly mortgaged to Wurlitzer under a duly recorded chattel mortgage. Rescission of the standing arrangement by reviving high priority claims—a substantial administration expense and a direct claim as a secured creditor to cash proceeds of the alleged security presented a significant risk of net loss to the remaining creditors. The attorneys for petitioner advanced nothing to relieve the Trustee's proper concern with the specific threat to the estate that the circumstances presented.

Accordingly, on the petition to review it is ORDERED that the Order of The Honorable Samuel C. Duberstein, Referee in Bankruptcy, that the Trustee need not take any steps to object to the claims of National Bank of Westchester, Milton Negrin, Wurlitzer Acceptance Corporation, Wurlitzer Company, or William Wadsworth, entered March 9, 1965, be and it hereby is in all respects affirmed.

APPENDIX E

Referee's Order of March 9, 1965

[SAME TITLE]

At Brooklyn, New York, in said District, on the 9th day of March, 1955,

A motion having duly come on to be heard before me on the 18th day of February, 1965, upon application of the Trustee for instructions with respect to the prosecution of objections to the claims of various creditors,

Now, on reading and filing the Notice of Motion dated February 8, 1965, the affidavit of Joseph Jaspan, Esq., sworn to February 8, 1965, the letter of Mechta & Mechta, Esqs., dated May 4, 1964, and the reply thereto by Joseph Jaspan, Esq., dated May 6, 1964, the affidavit of Frances Mechta, Esq., dated February 16, 1965, in opposition thereto, and after hearing Joseph Jaspan, Esq., attorney for the Trustee, Mechta & Mechta, Esqs., by Frances Mechta, Esq., Chadbourne, Parke, Whiteside & Wolff, Esqs., by Zachary Shimer, Esq., and Close, Griffiths, McCarthy & Gaynor, Esqs., with respect to said motion, and upon the record made therein and the written opinion of this Court dated February 26, 1965, it is ORDERED, that the Trustee need not take any steps to object to the claims of National Bank of Westchester, Milton Negrin, Wurlitzer Acceptance Corp., Wurlitzer Company or William Wadsworth.

APPENDIX F

Referee's Decision of February 26, 1965

[SAME TITLE]

The trustee herein has petitioned this Court for instructions as to whether to file objections to certain claims upon the basis of information contained in correspondence from Mechta & Mechta, attorneys for one Larry Leon, "president" of the bankrupt.

The opinion of the late Honorable Louis J. Castellano, Referee in Bankruptcy, dated August 15, 1960, determined that each of the claims involved was, in fact, that of a creditor of the bankrupt.

There appears to be no basis for objection to the claim of Milton Negrin, filed in the sum of $1,700.00, and, in fact, Mechta & Mechta consented, in open court on December 17, 1963, to the payment of a dividend on this claim.

The claim of National Bank of Westchester, in the sum of $89,353.04, is based upon a guaranty agreement and Confession of Judgment which has been entered. It was accepted for filing upon the mandate of the United States Court of Appeals, Second Circuit. No sound basis has been presented for attacking it as to validity or amount.

The claim of Wurlitzer Acceptance Corporation, filed herein in the sum of $9,036.00, has been determined to be a valid claim throughout the litigation involving the order of adjudication.

The claim of the Wurlitzer Company, in the sum of $1,064,832.87, constitutes more than 90 per cent of the total claims filed. While broad charges have been made that the claim is subject to offsets, this Court is persuaded that protracted litigation with respect thereto would be wasteful of the assets of the estate. The Wurlitzer Company has waived its right to allege that it holds a secured claim, and its counsel have waived the right to apply for an allowance as attorneys for petitioning creditors, in the expectation that the Wurlitzer Company claim would not be disturbed. Any reduction of less than a major portion of the claim is not likely to result in any significant benefit to other creditors.

The claim of William Wadsworth for wages, in the sum of $125.00, has been the subject of considerable litigation and has been sustained at every level.

Accordingly, upon the record before me, no further proceedings need be instituted regarding these claims. Settle order on notice.
